A. Frontini Gets His Liquor Back.
Mrs. Brogini Bound Over.

The two cases of State vs. Ambrogio Frontini and State vs. Mrs. Cleofa Brogini, were brought up in city court yesterday morning before Judge J. G. Wing, having been continued since Monday morning. Ten witnesses were subpoenaed by the state in the Brogini case in anticipation of a hearing, but W. A. Lord, attorney for the respondent, decided to waive examination and allow his client to be bound over to county court. This was done and she was admitted to bail of $300, which was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Ambrogio Frontini, the latter being the respondent in the other case which was brought up. Grand Juror Bailey stated to the court that in this case, he had been unable to collect sufficient evidence to insure conviction and would therefore recommend that the charge be not pressed. Judge Wing allowed this course of action, as the raising party of officers found no one at Mr. Frontini's residence, although about a half barrel of beer was taken from the cellar. The liquor was ordered returned to the original owners since the charge of keeping had been dropped.
The witnesses in the Brogini case were sworn to appear before the grand jury at the September term of court and each recognized in $300 bail until such time as they may be wanted.

As the result of a fracas which occurred Sunday evening on State street, Joseph Haycock was assigned in city court yesterday morning before Judge Wing and fined $25.00 for a breach of the peace against Frank Fecinet. Mr. Haycock pleaded guilty to the charge against him, and told the story of the encounter, after which the sentence of the court was passed upon him.

THE "LAZY BUG."

Report of Surgeon-General of Army Will Take up Consideration of That Parasite.

The hook worm, or "lazy bug," as it has been shown to exist in the southern states, according to investigations of the physical conditions of army recruits, will form an interesting chapter in the forthcoming report of the surgeon-general of the army, and probably will lead to a widespread effort on the parts of boards of health in the southern states to eradicate this disease, which a few years ago was brought prominently to the attention of the world in connection with the Porto Ricans. When the hook worm, referred to in the medical world as "uncinariasis," was declared to be prevalent in Porto Rico, resulting in a tendency to indolence on the part of the patient who otherwise appeared in usual health there was no suggestion that this peculiar parasite infected people in the United States army. Through the careful methods that have been adopted in the United States army, this disease has been shown to exist to a large extent.

This investigation has been progressing quietly during the last six or seven months, so that when Surgeon-General Thorneycroft makes up his annual report, he will have data to prove the prevalence of the hook worm among soldiers enlisted from southern states. The recruits passing through the army depots at Fort Slocum, N. Y., were examined to the number of 140, 109 of them being infected with the parasite. West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee all supplied recruits that were infected. In only two instances in this series of investigations was the anemia sufficiently severe to cause their rejection. After being treated, all of the infected soldiers gained in weight and improved in physical condition generally. Following this investigation of recruits it was discovered that uncinariasis was a common disease throughout the southern states. The surgeon-general may suggest the possibility of instituting some campaign against the disease in the south, but under present conditions it is said but little can be done except through the agency of state government.

END THE END OF THE WORLD.

A Theory That It Will Come by Fire Caused by Friction.

As to the length of time the earth is likely to last, the calculations are that it will not cease to be active for a good many millions of years, such activity not, however, necessarily supposing that life as we know it now will always be possible, the eventuality of a universal ice age being always a contingency that may occur again in the history of the globe.

It is interesting to note that in this connection a Swedish mystic called Stromberg has declared that the world would never know another ice age, but that it was now running out its course to the end. Its existence, he declared, would endure as long as the fire burned in the earth's bowels—that is, until the whole mass shall have become solidified. The internal fire, he said, provided the link which maintained the earth in the state of sphere of attraction. When this attraction shall fail, the earth, according to the Swede, will cease to revolve and will fall away, only to disappear by fire caused by friction, thus verifying the Biblical prophecy. As, however, the process of cooling down on earth will take some million of years, the nervous persons will note there is no immediate cause for alarm—New York World.

The Armed World.

Never were the nations so formidably armed as they have been this the first decade of the twentieth century, and in every Cabinet schemes are working to increase armies or navies, or both. Lord Roberts, the most illustrious of living soldiers, insists on doubling the military strength of Great Britain, and never before was there such effort to augment the naval strength of that empire.

Germany, with the most formidable military establishment, the world ever saw, is taxing her masses to the quick to put in commission a navy to rival that of England. France, for centuries the first military power on earth, is expending immense treasure to recruit, discipline and equip her army with a view to a successful resistance of a German invasion, and her navy is fourfold in its strength. The like story comes from Russia, Austria, Italy and even Spain.

Japan has astonished all Christendom by her exploits on land and sea, and never was there a more warlike people on the planet. Here is a recent dispatch from China:

"The new Chinese Government arsenal at Canton now turns out rifles and quick firing guns according to the latest patterns which are almost as good as imported from foreign countries with regard to make and finish."

Disturb not that torpid giant, was the admonition of Napoleon Bonaparte, the great mind in contemplation of affairs the military world has produced since Julius Caesar.

Our own country, so long free from entangling relations with foreign peoples, has created and equipped a navy second in power to England's only, and our people seem determined to keep it in that rank, regardless of cost.

If man were civilized these billions would be diverted from their contemplation of destruction and devoted to works of construction. Africa adequately developed consonant with her native physical energies would support a population equal to the entire world today.

But man is not yet civilized, and the thinkers tell us that war is the mightiest civilization. Perhaps it is so—Washington Post.

BEGINNING OF FORESTRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

Joshua Humphrey, "Constructor of the United States Navy" Was The Real Originator of The Scheme.

When did the United States begin the practice of forestry? Few persons can answer this question correctly. Most people are of the opinion that the beginning of forestry in this country was of very recent origin, and that the first step in that direction was taken among the mountains of the far West. Neither fact is correct.

While Washington was serving his first term as president of the United States, a recommendation came to him that the government ought to buy live oak islands on the coast of Georgia to make sure of a supply of ship timber for war vessels. The idea appears to have originated with Joshua Humphrey, whose official title was "Constructor of the United States Navy." Though about the only navy then existing was made up of six ships on paper, and not one stick of timber to build them had yet been cut. The vessels were designed to fight the north African pirates.

Five years after the recommendation was made Congress appropriated money to buy live oak land, Grover and Blackbeard islands on the coast of Georgia were bought for $25,000. They contained 1,950 acres.

Louisiana was bought soon after, and in 1817 the Six Islands, of 10,000 acres, and containing 37,000 live oak trees, were withdrawn from sale, and set apart as a reserve. In 1823, Congress appropriated $10,000 to buy additional live oak land on Santa Rosa Sound, western Florida, and subsequently other Florida timberlands, aggregating 207,224 acres, were reserved.

Up to that time nothing had been done than to buy or reserve land for the timber growing naturally upon it; but the work was to be carried further upon the Santa Rosa purchase. The plan included planting, protecting, cultivating, and cutting live oak for the navy. The timber was then considered indispensable in building war vessels.

Much had been said and written of the danger of exhaustion of supply. Settlers destroyed the timber for clearing land, and European nations were buying large quantities for their navies. In response to repeated warnings the government finally took steps to grow timber for its own use.

Young oaks were planted on the Santa Rosa lands. Difficulty was experienced in inducing young trees to grow. The successful transplanting of the oak is not easy, unless done at the proper time and in the right way. The plantations at Santa Rosa were generally successful, but large quantities of acorns were planted, and a fair proportion of them grew. But the chief efforts were directed to pruning, training, and caring for the wild trees. Thickets about them were cut away to let in air and light.

What the ultimate success of the forestry work would have been, cannot be told. The Civil War brought to a complete change in war vessels by substituting iron for wood. Forestry work stopped. The timber reserves were neglected. Squatters occupied the land. After a number of years all the reserves except some of the Florida land, were opened to settlement.

An Unhappy Wife Tells Frankly the Reasons for Her Unhappiness.

The July American Magazine contains a very remarkable human document in the shape of an article entitled, "The Confessions of a Rebellious Wife." Not since Marie Bashkirtseff has any woman written so frankly. The following is part of what she has to say:

"I didn't become rebellious till I went back to the city, with my boy rugged enough to go to school. My life with Frank apparently began as before. But it was really different. He had developed an air of expecting everything to be done for him, of being absolutely independent. He openly showed amusement at things that did not inspire his interest and respect. I took up my life feverishly. I longed to live in an atmosphere of stimulating interests. Toward all my little doings Frank assumed an air of tolerant contempt. The people who came to our house bored him unless they were business men like him, self, and, of course, successful. His manner with nearly everyone was superior and patronizing. For a while I tried to force myself to discuss with him the things I cared for. Often I saw that he didn't know what I was talking about. Often he ridiculed. Gradually I ceased to try to depend on him. Once I had longed for his return in the late afternoon. I remember perfectly the winter evening when I shivered at the sound of his key in the latch.

"All this is horrible. But its commonness is my justification for setting it down here. With me the situation was simply this: During courtship Frank had fancied that he was in love with his ideal, and he loved me for being his ideal. I had seen him as he was and I loved him for what he was. After the first year or so of married life he did not care for his ideal. He wished me to be something else. He actually resented my trying to go on being what he wished me to be. And I began to resent his attitude toward me and almost to hate him for what he had developed into."

FANNED!

When the sun boils down and the heat sinks in, we all want to be fanned. There is only one way—the electric way.

Electric fans cost only $9.00 and take about as much current as one 8 candle power lamp.

Therefore it is not expensive to be "fanned" occasionally.

And it is only one of the comforts at the call of the man who uses electric light.
